The PIERSONS

The name Pierson is supposed to have come from the French Pierre and son, or perhaps further back, from the Danish Peterson. In England the name was in use as early as the first part of the fifteenth century, in Yorkshsire. It has been variously spelled Pierson, Pearson, Person and even Parsons.

The ancestors of the Pierson family were clear, cool, consistent men of mature opinions, of large and fair views. They were rare men, men of comprehensive, exact, liberal, regulated minds. They were highly educated, and stood high in the community in regard to educational talents and integrity. Being nearly all of Puritan stock they possessed all the religious earnestness of their age.

The Rev. Abraham Pierson, immigrant ancestor, was born in Yorkshire, England in 1613, and graduated at Trinity College, Cambridge, 1632. He came to America in 1639, and was in Boston and Lynn, Mass. in 1640. Before leaving England he had been ordained as an Episcopal minister, and had preached there for a while. He came to America in search of religious liberty and was ordained in Boston as a Congregational minister.

In 1640, "finding themselves straightened, about forty families, with Pierson as their Minister," departed from Lynn and attempted to make a settlement on the west end of Long Island, but were prevented by the Dutch and repaired to the east end, where they laid the foundation of Southhampton. He became the first minister of the church there, which was started as Congregational, but afterward became Presbyterian.

He was rigid in his desire to have the "civil as well as the ecclesiastical power vested in the church and to allow none but church members to act in the choice of officers of Government, or to be eligible as such."

This led to a division of the colony, and in 1647 Pierson, with a small part of his congregation, attempted another settlement, across the sound, on the Connecticut shore. There they organized and formed the town of Branford. For twenty years he was the minister, and "enjoyed the confidence and esteem not only of the ministers, but the more prominent civilians connected with the New Haven colony."

He interested himself in behalf of the Indians, learned their language and prepared a catechism for them. He became to the Indians of Connecticut what Eliot and Mayhew were to those of Massachusetts. In 1665 he united with John Davenport in opposing the union of the New Haven and Connecticut colonies, being strongly against the liberality of the clergy of the Connecticut colony and desiring to keep the government entirely in the church.

On this account he refused to unite with the latter, and in 1666, with most of his congregation, left Branford and went to New Jersey. Here, on the Passaic, they purchased land from the Indians and laid the foundation of the city of Newark. During that year and the following about sixty-five men came from Branford and two neighboring towns.

They brought their church organization with them and became the first church in Newark. Each man was entitled to a homestead lot of six acres. Mr. Pierson was their minister for twelve years, and died ther August 9, 1678. His will was dated August 10, 167X. He married Abigail, daughter of Rev. John Wheelwright, of Lincolnshire, England, who came to New Hampshire.

His son Abraham Pierson (1641-1707) was the first President of Yale College - 1701-1707.

Henry Pierson was one of the first settlers of Southhampton, Long Island, in 1640, coming from Lynn, Mass. with his brother Abraham. He served as clerk of Suffolk County from 1655 to 1669 and was founder of the public school system. He married Mary, daughter of John Cooper of Lynn, Mass.
